

Forward

This compilation of the membership of the Missouri legislature marks the latest chapter in a project that has spanned more than 50 years.

Thomas D. Shriver, a researcher for the Secretary of State's office in the 1930s, compiled the first complete listing of Missouri's legislators. Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick updated and revised Shriver's roster in 1976 in observance of the bicentennial of the American Revolution. Today, we are proud to offer the current edition, which includes legislators from territorial days on through the current membership of the 84th General Assembly.

On behalf of the staff of the Missouri Archives, who compiled this listing, let me present the 1988 Historical Listing of Missouri Legislature. It is my hope that this unique reference work will be valuable to Missourians today and in years to come.

Best regards,

Roy D. Blunt Secretary of State

A retrospective:

The Missouri General Assembly

Like the waters of the Missouri River flowing steadily past the State Capitol in Jefferson City, Missouri's elected representatives and senators have always been part of the state's heritage. Just as the river has sometimes been turbulent and sometimes calm, so too has the General Assembly weathered the traumatic and presided over times of prosperity.

In every case, it was the men and women of the Missouri legislature who shouldered the responsibilities of state government by addressing the issues of the day. This tradition of committed public service began during the state's territorial days and continues today, over 175 years after Congress approved Missouri's representative form of government.

The name "General Assembly" was given to the legislative body of the Territory of Missouri by an Act of Congress on June 4, 1812. The meeting of the first territorial General Assembly occurred in the home of Pierre Chouteau in St. Louis on the first Monday in July 1813. Chouteau charged the territory $3 a day for the use of his home.

This first General Assembly consisted of the Governor (appointed by President James Monroe for a term of three years), a Legislative Council of nine persons, also appointed by the President, and a House of Representatives. Members of the Legislative Council served five-year terms and were required to be at least 25 years old and own at least 200 acres of land. Members of the House of Representatives had to be 21 years of age, residents of the territory for at least one year prior to the election, free-holders and must have paid a territorial or county tax. Laws passed at that first session of the territorial general assembly included a weights and measures bill, a law to create the office of sheriff, and laws relating to crimes and punishments. In the absence of a Capitol building, the General Assembly continued to meet in the homes of St. Louis residents over the next several years.

The first General Assembly to convene after Missouri adopted a state constitution gathered at the Missouri Hotel in St. Louis on September 18, 1820. This legislature designated St. Charles as the temporary seat of government. The second session of the first state legislature convened in St. Charles in June 1821, with all 43 representatives and 14 senators present.

According to the 1820 Constitution, representatives served two-year terms and were required to be 24 years of age, residents of the state for two years and residents of the county from which they were elected for one year. Senators served four-year terms and had to be 30 years old, residents of the state for four years and residents of the districts they represented for one year.

The Missouri General Assembly did not meet in Jefferson City until the third Monday in November 1826. At the time, there were fewer than 40 buildings in the newly created capital city, and only 31 families. Most General Assembly members stayed at the Rising Sun Hotel, a building which stood at the corner of modern-day Madison and State Streets, where the Union Electric building is now located. At least a few legislators sought temporary shelter in hastily pitched tents. A visitor to Jefferson City not long thereafter described the town as follows: "Tis a rough looking city indeed, and one which does not bid fair to become of much importance."

Today, the Missouri legislature numbers 163 representatives and 34 senators, and the Capitol has become a place of increasing importance. General Assembly members are no longer required to seek shelter in tents during the legislative session in a "rough looking city," but they continue to make sacrifices of time and energy for their constituents and for all the citizens of the State of Missouri. This legislative review is dedicated to those who have served in the Missouri General Assembly.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

Recent history focuses on parents, siblings serving in Missouri General Assembly.

Representative Claire McCaskill became the state's first "expectant" legislator. She gave birth to Austin Christopher on September 6, 1987, in Kansas City.

Another sibling/parent combination occurred recently in the Missouri legislature, this time involving mother and son. State Senator Pat Danner and State Representative Steve Danner both were elected to their respective offices in 1982.

Prior to 1985, there had never been a father serving in the General Assembly with a son serving at the same time as a state official. In 1985 it happened twice. From left, Secretary of State Roy Blunt, State Representative Leroy Blunt, State Senator Richard Webster and Attorney General William Webster all were serving in state government during the 83rd General Assembly.
